

ABSTRACT

A device for removing an occlusion from within the central lumen of a tubular structure, where the device comprises an occlusion removing structure having a low profile configuration and having a high profile configuration. A method for removing an occlusion from within the central lumen of a tubular structure, where the method comprises providing a 5 device according to the present invention.